SALINA, Kan., Oct. 2 /PRNewswire/ -- TimerTrac.com, the leading third-party benchmarking service that objectively reports market timing performance based on daily market recommendations, announced today its top performers in shorting the CBOE NASDAQ 100 Index (NDX) for the first eight months (through August 31) of 2006.

TacticalTradingSignal.com returned 7.77% to beat the NASDAQ 100 Index by more than 11% when considering just the short trades. The NASDAQ 100 Index itself was down almost 4 percent for the period.

"We are pleased for these investment strategist successes as we are to have them participate in TimerTrac.com," said Dave Garrett, principal at TimerTrac. "Because of TimerTrac.com's flexibility, investors are able to view a variety of performances and their rankings based on these strategists' daily recommendations in a way that is completely objective and reliable and, in this particular case, who are the champions in shorting one of the most volatile of equity indexes. This study looked only at short trades while ignoring long trades and leverage, which in all cases added even greater gains. TimerTrac allows our subscribers to see which timers can make shorting work."
